The first in a new series following three firefighting brothers, Hot to the Touch was a steamy fast paced read. This supposed future set in stone is absolutely ridiculous and there is no reason whatsoever to make the ending so dramatic The Inevitable Surrender than trying to force some sort of emotion from the reader so that it therefore might be considered a good book. What I am not comfortable with is repetition and The Inevitable Surrender, by my estimation, is the worst sin of The Night Land. All that we do and seek to do is informed, even permeated, by what has been, but not rigidly determined by it. The Mathee novels will make you fall in love with the landscape of my birth - I still cry through most of her descriptions of the coastal forest - and the playwrights and poets give deep insight into the political times.
